

Chapter 146 - "Hard Level" World

With the blade in the sheath at his waist, God found himself on a large green plain covered with grass and flowers of various colors. On the horizon, some tall mountains caught his attention.

"Behind those mountains is the city he is in. Or maybe he is in the mountains. I can't tell exactly where he is." God had his map open. However, it was not easy to know his target's exact location.

The red dot on the map was large. The dot was flashing over a part of the mountain and the city; it took up a large part of the map. In other words, his target could be anywhere in that area.

He could be in the city in a small house or a cave in the mountains. Or the most improbable: He could be underground in a dungeon he created.

"It's something he loves to do." God smiled. God took off at high speed from the ground and crossed the blue sky towards the mountains. As he flew, he analyzed the surroundings.

Forests, mountains, pleasant weather. It was the perfect place for someone who likes to live in isolation. He was considering whether he should build a mansion in this place.

'No, I think staying in my usual room is more comfortable. Besides, annoying monsters might appear around here.' Despite the natural beauty and looking like a peaceful place, it was a dangerous place. 'Not just this region, the whole world is very dangerous.'

This world was created for people to live at 'Level Hard.'

While flying through the skies, God could even see dragons. In no world beyond this would something like this be possible. God wondered every day why his father created something like this.

"Perhaps it is because he is a man who loves entertainment as much as I do. I remember the many times I watched the people of this world with him. That hero, to this day, has not left my mind. And in the end, he died pathetically."

'I wonder if any heroes are left in this world,' God thought as he approached the mountains. Then he shook his head and stopped thinking about useless things. He focused on finding his target.

He flew over the mountains as he scanned carefully. On the highest part of the mountain was a crater, a volcano that was not active at the moment.

God approached the crater and looked at it, but nothing caught his attention.

"The surrounding area has no vegetation. This is to be expected since this volcano is often active." Within several kilometers radius, there was only rocky soil with a few trees here and there.

God passed by the volcano and found other mountains, but these were different. Although some of them had their vegetation damaged because of the volcano, they all had much more "life."

There were even small animals around. Of course, there were also monsters. Speaking of monsters, God was surprised that no dragons lived in the volcano; it's pretty common. But even if there was no dragon in the area, it still had dangerous monsters.

Giant boars, huge birds ready to attack, and even a colossal worm with half its body outside the earth. It was disgusting and a somewhat troublesome monster. It was a worm that could have up to seven hearts, so killing it was difficult.

"And I don't want to deal with a worm like that right now." God sighed and applied magic to his body. He passed next to the giant worm that was meters long without being noticed. Then the worm burrowed back into the earth.

Unable to be seen because of his magic, God passed through the mountains, and before he knew it, he could see the city. Surrounded by mountains, it was a beautiful "rural" city with unique architecture.

God had seen this town before, but he couldn't help but hold his breath.

"For a town that is in such a troubled region, this place is amazing." It was a large city with over 50,000 inhabitants. They had large buildings of up to three stories that were very well-architected.

The streets were paved, and they even had a drinking water supply for the entire population. Having a water supply is easy because a huge river flows around the city.

"It's like an island in the middle of the mountains... I don't know if that's a good description, but it's the first thing I can think of."

God landed on the road that led to the city gate. Yes, the whole city was surrounded by a wall. But it wasn't a high wall, and it wasn't sturdy. Despite this, it didn't seem that they were attacked often.

As he landed on the road, God looked back. It was a large tunnel that ran through all the mountains.

"Going through this tunnel every time you want to leave the city or enter the city must be tiring."

God opened his map once again. Now that he had gotten a little closer to the city, he could get some sense of where his target was. And he was in the town. "This is going to be fun."

God gave a smile and deactivated his magic. However, before he did that, he completely changed his appearance. He now had the appearance of a middle-aged man, different from his previous appearance.

"Brown hair, green eyes and some muscles. Yeah, that's good." If God had to give him a grade, he would be a grade 7 man. He's handsome, but he wouldn't draw that much attention. It was the perfect disguise.

And now he would go into the city and find his target. He probably couldn't hide, and his target would recognize him as soon as he saw him, but he didn't care.
