

Miss Ashley's

Week of 8/4

Notes

1. Alright, the news is dry af and stories are hard to come by besides abortion rights and AJ, so lets work with what we can.

2. Obviously, Alex Jones needs to be a majority of an episode. (Maybe plug in the organization Ms. Lewis runs for good measure.) Talk about what you would do or how you would feel as a plaintiff's attorney in this situation aka your client getting shit talked during the trial. Also, so many people have found the old story of the CP that Infowars produced in discovery and without checking (of course) have instantly started to claim that's what's on his phone. This is a case of the left needing to rein it in/fucking check story dates.

I hate to be a downer, but too many people outside of Knowledge fight/OA fail to realize this is a jury trial and think the judge has the last say in this case. How so? Because they're watching clips and just catching wind of it now due to his lawyers fuck up making the news. Our side is also jumping the gun and already claiming victory. As much as this is a slam dunk case, we need to be rational and say hey "Shit can go south real quick because of the jury".

3. Coverage idea: Look at the recent primaries. The good, bad, and ugly about recent results. Kansas has a governors race and the recent abortion upheval could spell trouble for such a red state, Mark McCloskey only got 3% of the vote, Ron Watkins came in dead ass last with only 3% of the vote for his race, Joe Arpaio is losing another race... But in light of that, the state im most concerned with is Arizona and the stop the steal nominees that have advanced like Blake Masters.

Also what are they going to do about the death of Rep. Jackie Walorski (R-Ind.)? Special election, replacement, etc.
