VAL

FLISS

- Hermit →
- Writer →
- Unresolved issues →
- Shy →
+ grumpy

- ← Loves travelling
- ← Works nights at the pub
- ← extroverted + cheerful

These two are showing up more as I get closer to finishing the script. The basic premise: Val lives in the country surrounded by a small amount of land that she owns. Fliss keeps trespassing, though Val is too shy to tell her off, and doesn't like to leave the house. Val becomes accustomed to seeing Fliss pass by twice a day, once on her way into the forest, and once on her way back. On an especially cold day, Fliss doesn't return, and it begins to snow heavily. Val decides (after agonising over it for a bit) to go looking for Fliss, and finds her half freezing and lost. The snowstorm continues to get more severe, and the chances of Fliss making it home are slim, so Val invites her to stay.

It's the ol' trapped in a snowstorm cliché, but with angst and lesbians.

(Wait - I - wasn't ready!)

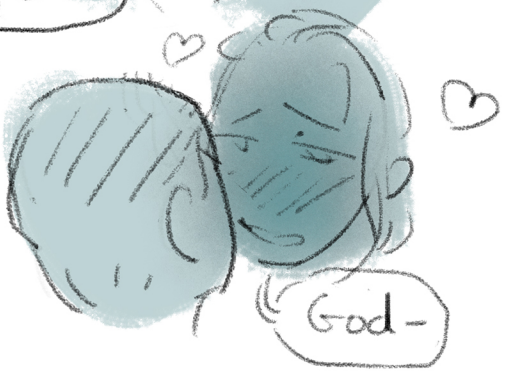

It's alright.

Q: what's Juliens favourite and least favourite chore?

Why would I have a favourite chore...?

Worst is cleaning the oven.
It never even looks better when it's done.

You DO rush it...

I asked (a long time ago) for some Q&A questions, and I'm working my way through. I might ask for a few more soon, so I can use it for eventual public chapter break art!

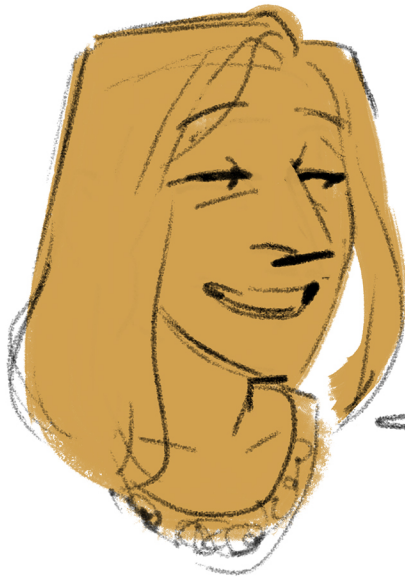

Q: What do you like about each other?

Marnie's good at saying no. I think I envy that, I always do too much for other people.

He's so Nice. Like some people are nice because they want something back, Roman's not like that.

Marnie makes me laugh, she has no filter, I like that kind of honesty in people.

Julien is...Kinda stupid. I like that, makes me feel smarter. Also it's really cute.

He has so much energy, it's a little contagious.

Roman always seems to be able to tell if I'm not OK, even if I say I am. Maybe that's not always a good thing. But its nice to feel seen like that.

Sorry, maybe that's a bit deep.

Q: Do you like your job?
